

One Kansan's Anti-Racism Campaign:

“The Race to Work and the Work of Race: Marcet Haldeman-Julius's 1927 Kansas Anti-Racism Campaign”

a presentation and discussion by Jason Barrett-Fox

Monday, June 10, 2013, 7:30 p.m.
Dorothy Bramlage Public Library
320 W. 7th St, Junction City, Kansas

Sponsored by Prairie Heritage, Inc.
and Geary County Juneteenth made possible by the Kansas Humanities Council

By the mid 1920s, racial conflict in Kansas was such that the Ku Klux Klan was building a membership into the tens of thousands. Newspaper publisher and author Marcet Haldeman-Julius became an advocate for African American college students across the state. Barrett-Fox will discuss how she surveyed, interviewed, and hosted students, ultimately taking her fight to the University of Kansas where she played a part in changing the institution's racist policies.

This program is part of the Kansas Humanities Council's "The Way We Worked" Speakers Bureau.

For more information:

Deliliah Hamilton, 785.226.2750, deliliahdansby@yahoo.com

Margy Stewart, 785.539.5592, zzstew@flinthills.com, prairieheritage.org